May 2, 2005 - Overcoming Racism:
Issues, Strategies, and Ally Building

Gina Adeyemi

Lauren Crowner

Jos N. Holman

Alan Manifold

Jacquett C. Wade

Jacqueline
Walcott-McQuigg

what:

The luncheon program will feature a panel of community members sharing their diverse perspectives on how to overcome racism.

After the panel discussion, a three-hour interactive workshop will delve into ally building. The majority of the time at the workshop will be spent on skill building so that you can become an effective ally in working toward racial justice.

An "ally" is defined as a member of a dominant group who works to eliminate oppression in her/his life, on a personal and professional level, by supporting and advocating for oppressed populations.

Are you concerned about racial justice?
Please join us on May 2nd at the YWCA!

One of the methods of working toward justice is called "ally building," and it will be the focus of a YWCA workshop on May 2nd.

Allies are members of a dominant group who work to eliminate oppression in their lives, on a personal and professional level, by supporting and advocating for oppressed populations.

People who choose to become allies take personal responsibility because "they understand the interconnectedness of our lives as humankind," says workshop leader Jacquett C. Wade of Purdue University. "What affects me affects you."

The May 2nd workshop will address specific actions people can take to end oppression and grow into better allies.
